Fact sheet and form

Contribution flexibility

Giving members the flexibility to choose their level of standard member contributions.

What this fact sheet covers

This fact sheet explains how Defined Benefit Division and Accumulation 2 members can reduce their standard member contributions under UniSuper’s contribution flexibility arrangements—and the implications of doing so.

Who is this fact sheet for?

People who are:

→ already Defined Benefit Division or Accumulation 2 members
→ considering reducing their standard member contributions.

What is contribution flexibility?

Defined Benefit Division (DBD) and Accumulation 2 members are required to make standard member contributions equal to 7% (after tax) of their salary (or 8.25% before tax) each pay period. Members can, however, reduce the level of standard member contributions they make under our contribution flexibility arrangements.

Contribution flexibility reflects our commitment to help members balance the demands of their current lifestyle with the need to save for retirement.

What levels can you reduce your standard member contributions to?

You can reduce standard member contributions to levels outlined in the following tables. Your employer will continue to make contributions on your behalf at your agreed rate—this will be 17% or 14%, depending on your employment arrangements.

Note: standard member contributions from your before-tax salary attract a 15% ‘contributions tax’ (you don’t need to do anything about this—we take care of it for you automatically). Standard member contributions from your after-tax salary don’t attract this tax.

What should you consider before deciding to reduce your level of standard member contributions?

DO YOU WANT MORE SUPER IN RETIREMENT?
If you reduce your standard member contributions, you’re likely to have less super at retirement than you would have if you kept contributing at a higher rate.

Short-term financial needs are important to take care of, but if you use your super to meet those needs it might mean your future self is worse off. Before deciding to reduce your standard member contributions, we recommend you speak to a qualified financial adviser.

WHAT ARE THE EFFECTS ON YOUR DEFINED BENEFIT?

<table>

<tr>
<td>7% after tax (8.25% before tax)</td>
<td>Your full defined benefit entitlement is maintained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.45% after tax (5.25% before tax)</td>
<td>Your full defined benefit entitlement is maintained. However, your ability to pay for external insurance cover from your accumulation component may be affected. This is because contributions previously made to your accumulation component will be redirected to your defined benefit component. Read the Product Disclosure Statement at unisuper.com.au/pds for more information.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4% after tax (4.70% before tax)</td>
<td>Your defined benefit entitlement is scaled back to reflect your reduced standard member contributions, and your ability to pay for external insurance cover from your accumulation component may be affected. This is because contributions previously made to your accumulation component will be redirected to your defined benefit component. Read the Product Disclosure Statement at unisuper.com.au/pds for more information.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3% after tax (3.55% before tax)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2% after tax (2.35% before tax)</td>

<tr>
<td>1% after tax (1.20% before tax)</td>

<tr>
<td>Minimum level: 0%</td>

</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Information for DBD members

The following table outlines the minimum level of standard member contributions you must make to maintain your full defined benefit entitlements.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>MINIMUM LEVELS OF STANDARD MEMBER CONTRIBUTIONS REQUIRED TO MAINTAIN YOUR FULL DEFINED BENEFIT ENTITLEMENT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>If you receive 17% contributions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4.45% (after tax) of your salary (5.25% before tax)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

If you reduce your standard member contributions below these levels, we’ll adjust your ‘average contribution factor’ – a part of the defined benefit formula.

Because you’ll be contributing less, this will reduce your defined benefit entitlement.
WHAT ARE THE EFFECTS ON YOUR INBUILT BENEFITS?

DBD membership will generally entitle you to inbuilt benefits. These are designed to protect you financially if you become temporarily or permanently unable to work due to illness or injury, and also provide benefits for your loved ones if you die. Inbuilt benefits are determined by a formula, and DBD members can’t opt out of them. It can be helpful to think of them as similar to insurance.

Reducing your standard member contributions can affect your inbuilt benefits—see the following table for more information.

EFFECT ON INBUILT BENEFITS IF YOU REDUCE YOUR STANDARD MEMBER CONTRIBUTIONS

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of inbuilt benefit</th>
<th>What will happen</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Temporary Incapacity</td>
<td>Nothing—the amount of your inbuilt Temporary Incapacity benefit will stay the same.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Disablement</td>
<td>Nothing—the amount of your inbuilt Disablement benefit will stay the same.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Terminal Medical Condition</td>
<td>The amount of your inbuilt Terminal Medical Condition benefit would be reduced*.*</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Death</td>
<td>The amount of your inbuilt Death benefit would be reduced*.*</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

* An inbuilt Death benefit is calculated for DBD members by combining your retirement benefit with a benefit for potential service to age 60. Reducing your standard member contributions will reduce your retirement benefit—meaning the total benefit payable on Death or due to a Terminal Medical Condition would also reduce.

Information for DBD and Accumulation 2 members

What are the effects on external insurance cover?

Any insurance cover you already have as a UniSuper member will continue, provided you’ve got sufficient funds in your accumulation account or component to cover the cost of your insurance premiums.

If you can no longer pay your premiums, or don’t meet the requirements under UniSuper’s group insurance policies, your insurance cover will cease.

Frequently asked questions

Q: If I reduce my standard member contributions, can I increase them at a later date?

A: No. If you’d like to make additional contributions and you’ve already reduced your standard member contributions, any extra super payments you make will need to be voluntary member contributions to your accumulation component (if you’re a DBD member) or accumulation account (if you’re an Accumulation 2 member).

Q: How do I find out how much my employer contributes to my super?

A: The payslips your employer provides will probably include a breakdown of employer and member contributions made to your UniSuper account. If not, you’ll need to ask your employer.

Q: Should I tell my employer if I reduce my standard member contributions?

A: Yes. Your employer will need to ensure that their payroll deductions reflect your correct contribution rate.
Q: I’m receiving 17% employer contributions and have reduced my standard member contributions to zero. What happens if a future employer only makes 14% contributions?
A: You’ll need to make standard member contributions of at least 2.55% (after tax) of your salary (3.00% before tax) to ensure your total contributions remain at the minimum level.

Q: My current employer only makes 14% contributions— but a previous employer made 17% contributions—and I’ve reduced my standard member contributions to zero. What happens?
A: You’ll need to make standard member contributions of at least 2.55% (after tax) of your salary (3.00% before tax) to ensure your total contributions remain at the minimum level.

Q: My employer and I are currently making ’half contributions’. Can I exercise contribution flexibility?
A: No. However, if you and your employer start making full contributions, you can then use contribution flexibility to reduce your standard member contributions.

Q: How do I reduce my standard member contributions?
A: Complete the attached Contribution flexibility application form and then submit it to the person responsible for super at your workplace.

Q: If I do reduce my standard member contributions, when will the reduction take effect?
At the start of the next pay period after we process your Contribution flexibility application form. For more information about contribution flexibility, call us on 1800 331 685.
Contribution flexibility application form

Before completing this form
Reducing your standard member contributions is a permanent decision—you can’t reverse it or reinstate your previous level of standard member contributions later on.
If you reduce your standard member contributions and would like to make additional contributions in the future, any extra super payments you make will need to be voluntary member contributions to your accumulation component or account.
If you reduce your standard member contributions, your retirement savings will be reduced. Before making this decision, we recommend you:

→ read the Defined Benefit Division and Accumulation 2 Product Disclosure Statement (PDS), the Insurance in your super booklet and the What happens to your inbuilt benefits if you choose Accumulation 2? booklet, which are incorporated by reference into the PDS.
→ read the Contribution flexibility fact sheet, and → speak to a qualified financial adviser.

Any reduction to your standard member contributions will take effect at the start of the next pay period after we process your Contribution flexibility application form.
